

Journey through the Netherlands

NE

After a long holiday, a friend group finally sees each other again, each with the most beautiful stories and adventures. Everyone had a different journey through our beautiful country by train. The journey of Robin started after being on Texel with his family to watch seals. His family went home by car, but Robin started his journey in the port of the ferry. After a while at this beautiful place, Robin decided that he wanted to see some great electric machines, so he went to Teylers museum.

At the same time, Wesley started his journey in the city that was under siege in the Eighty Years' War. In this city, there was one hero: a woman by the name of Kenau Simonsdochter. Wesley was done with long walks in the city, so he wanted to see some beautiful paintings. He then took the train to the city of the Rijksmuseum and visited it.

Wouter wanted a different view of the older cities in the Netherlands. He started in the city that has the nickname Haringstad, because of the history of fishing for herring. He also had to try some of the herring there, but didn't find it too delicious. Wouter wanted to relax after the not-so-delicious herring, so he went on and danced at one of the biggest parties from the ADE.

There was one person that wanted to see animals. Therefore, Micheal visited a zoo, namely Artis. He loved to see the flamingos that were standing there in the water. He didn't like the monkeys because the monkeys stole the IA stickers that he had. So please, if you are in Artis, look for the stickers. What he loved more than the flamingos were trains. So he wanted to see the oldest trains in the Netherlands.

Because the Netherlands is so big and Rosan didn't see everything in the Netherlands, she decided that she would start her journey in the north of the Netherlands and visit the city that is home to the blue fingers. She then went to go with the train to the mountain church.

From the view of a magnificent church called the Saint Lebuïnuskerk, Bart was thinking about the life that he had. He got the feeling that he was getting old, which could be cost by standing on an old building. That's why Bart decided to go to a museum where he would feel really young, It is the open air museum

One of the only places in the Netherlands with diverse animal life is the Oostvaardersplassen. Carlijn decided that she wanted to really feel the nature. She took a long walk and saw all different kinds of animals. After the long walk, she decided that she wanted to go home. She went back to her magnificent house, better known as Palace Het Loo.

Then the last one of the friend group, Bram. Bram is always very busy with stuff for Inter-Actief. It was no surprise that in the summer holiday, he was still busy. He wanted to visit the location of the SNIc of 2021 to see how it is. After that, he could finally relax, so he went to a museum called Huis van Katoen en Nu.
