

An Esoteric Play

Quarrelling lovers.
Tybalt, a remarkable young man.
Helen, a woman of great renown.
Julia, a similar woman to Helen.
Duncan, a young man of great intelligence.

Act I: No words minced.

Scene I: heavy words.

[Enter Duncan and Helen]

Helen: Thou are the difference between a chihuahua and a vile horrible smelly toad. Thou are the square of thyself.

Helen: Thou are as stupid as the sum of thyself and a vile rotten smelly pig. Speak your mind!

Duncan: Thou are the square of a lovely pretty golden hair. Thou are the sum of a beautiful fair embroidered charming thing and thyself. Thou are the sum of a pretty golden hair and thyself. Speak your mind!

Duncan: Thou are as beautiful as the difference between thyself and a chihuahua. Speak your mind!
[Exeunt]

Scene II: More endearing words.

[Enter Julia and Tybalt]

Julia: Thou are as brave as the sum of a bold charming hero and an amazing beautiful tree. Thou are the square of thyself.

Julia: Thou are the sum of thyself and a lovely grandmother. Speak your mind!

Tybalt: Thou are as beautiful as Helen. Thou are the difference between thyself and a pretty honest thing. Speak your mind!

Julia: Thou are as brave as Duncan. Thou are as stupid as the difference between thyself and a lying oozing cowardly rotten hog.

Julia: Thou are the difference between thyself and a hair. Speak your mind!
[Exeunt]

Puzzle code:

r4eDSCyu88nRkie